SUBJECT: Care Nureyev
Espionage X

On 3/19/64 [REDACTED] Hyatt House Hotel, 808 N. Main St made available the attached hand-printed note, which was found by [REDACTED] on 3/18/64 while cleaning and re-arranging room #110.

[REDACTED] advised that [REDACTED] was taking a plaque, made of plaster cast material with figurine design, from the wall when the note fell to the floor. The back of the figurine area has indentations, which would afford a place to conceal and hold the paper.

[REDACTED] explained that the date 7/19, if the year 1963, was during the period of the Salinas Rodeo.

[REDACTED] advised that registration records, covering the above period, can be made available if necessary

K2 The Hyatt House Hotel registration card bearing hand printed name and address [redacted]

K3 Voucher of Salinas registration card No. [redacted] bearing handwritten name and address [redacted]

K4 Voucher of Salinas registration card No. [redacted] bearing hand printed and handwritten name and address [redacted]

K5 Photocopy of [redacted] application bearing hand printing of [redacted]

Result of examination:

The known specimens, K1 through K5, are not adequate for comparison with the questioned hand printing on Q1.

No indented writing was found on Q1.

Specimen Q1 was tested for signature patterns in an effort to determine the approximate date the note was hand printed with negative results. The age of this writing does not appear to be determinable by this means.

[REDACTED] advised that [REDACTED] could not be certain that [REDACTED] had ever seen [REDACTED] before although the face seemed to be familiar.

[REDACTED] made available all guest registration cards for the Hyatt House Hotel for the months of June and July 1963. These cards were examined for [REDACTED] name, automobile license number and also for names of individuals at the Defense Language Institute, Monterey, California who might logically be considered suspects as the "Agent" referred to by [REDACTED] as his contact. Nothing of significance was noted.

Informant was asked if he is familiar with the name RUDOLPH NUREYEV and whether he could furnish any information concerning this individual. It is noted that NUREYEV is a Soviet who was formerly associated with the Kirov Ballet, Leningrad, prior to his defection to the West, at Paris, France, on 6/6/63.

Informant immediately recognized the name of NUREYEV as that of a Soviet defector. He also remembered that NUREYEV was a ballet dancer. He said that somewhere he heard NUREYEV had written a book but informant said he has never seen this book and has not read it. He said that, to his knowledge, no one in the Soviet colony in NY has ever spoken of NUREYEV in his presence. Informant said he could furnish no information relating to NUREYEV's defection, nor does he have any information reflecting that NUREYEV has, in any way, been connected with espionage activity.

he had written to RUDOLF NUREYEV, defected Russian ballet artist, while NUREYEV was in Los Angeles and he was in [REDACTED] California. He stated, however, that he had never personally met NUREYEV and he denied writing the note which was found at the Hyatt House Hotel, Salinas, California, in March, 1964. Interviewing Agents noted, however, that [REDACTED] in furnishing a sample of his handwriting deliberately attempted to disguise his printing by printing in lower case letters. It was pointed out to him that he usually prints in capital letters, and he was requested to use capitals on the second specimens. The specimens containing names and addresses from the [REDACTED] were done by him in a relaxed manner and are probably the truest sample of his printing.

[REDACTED] was obviously shaken on observing the note on the Hyatt House stationery and made the spontaneous statement that the printing thereon looks just like his. He later stated that, when he first saw the note, he thought it was the letter he had written to NUREYEV in Los Angeles. He also stated that, up until quite recently, he has used a Shaeffer cartridge refill pen which wrote similarly to the pen used in the Hyatt House note.

[REDACTED] was courteous and cooperative throughout the interview and indicated he would be receptive to further contact. It is contemplated to recontact him before [REDACTED] and to obtain further handwriting samples from him, using broad-point pen.

Top Ballet Stars Held In Hip Raid

By BARON MULLER
Staff Writer

Dame Margot Fonteyn and Rudolf Nureyev, the world-famed top stars of Britain's Royal Ballet, were arrested at a wild Haight-Ashbury hippie party early today.

Dame Margot, in her costly white mink coat, fled to a neighboring roof as police arrived, and was caught there.

"Rudi," in a fitted pea jacket and form-fitting slacks, was found prone on another rooftop.

Sixteen others — including hippies and friends of the fabulous pair — also were arrested.

MARIJUANA CHARGE

All were booked for visiting a house where marijuana is used or kept, and disturbing the peace.

The stars were the first to be released — on $330 bail apiece put up by the ballet manager, V. H. Clark — and were ordered to appear in court tomorrow morning.

It was a rude come-down for the idolized dancers, the most popular in the Western world.

Rudi, with his daring ballet technique, flowing reddish-blond locks and flamboyant personality, has been the darling of San Francisco society since the troupe began its local engagement July 6.

Margot, who "retired" at 40 but is still packing them in at 48, has thousands of fans whose ardor amounts to adulation.

BEHIND EARS

But today, like ordinary misbehaving citizens, they were herded to Park Police Station and then to City Prison at the Hall of Justice in a paddy wagon, fingerprinted, photographed and held behind bars.

La Fonteyn took it in the grand manner — radiant, smiling, beautiful and gracious if disinclined to talk.

"I'm not going to answer a single thing," she said mildly. "I want to see my attorney."

Her only sign of pique was when she remarked to the ballet manager after their release:

"In England, they don't allow the press in the jails."

RUDI CROSS

Rudi, on the other hand, was cross.

"You're all children!" he snapped at reporters at the Hall of Justice.

He postured in an attitude of disdain, walked to a television camera and breathed on its lens to fog it, then rubbed his hand in his long hair and wiped his fingers on the lens.

"Oh, I won't answer anything," he declared.

He struck an exaggerated ballet pose — parodying the magnificent technique which has made him the idol of balletomanes over the world — as a policeman gave him the routine pocket-patting search at the district station.

TRUE NAME

Margot was booked under her true name — Margot Arias. Her husband is Roberto Arias, Panamanian politician partly paralyzed by an assassin's bullet several years ago.

The Russian-born Rudi gave his age as 29. The booking officer, no ballet fancier, spelled the name "Noureev."

It all began last night after the two starred in the Opera House repeat performance of "Paradise Lost" — a modern ballet leaning toward the psychedelic, described recently by Examiner critic Arthur Bloomfield as "curious, chic and occasionally rather revolting."

The dancers and a group of friends, including Richard Cornwell, 32, assistant director of the Seattle Symphony, who was among those arrested, had supper after the performance at Trader Vic's.

INVITED TO PAD

They had been invited to the "pad" of Kirk Terrill, 42 Belvedere St., earlier in the evening by a group of hippies who attended the Opera House performance and went backstage afterward to compliment the dancers.

At Trader Vic's someone suggested that they take up the hippies' invitation. Eight of them piled into taxis and drove to the Belvedere Street place, on the top floor of an old wood frame four-story building.

Loud stereo music from the party was heard throughout the neighborhood.

"You could hear it a block away," officer Arthur Fobbs said later.

Neighbors stood it until 3 a.m., when they called police.

Officer Fobbs, who answered the call with Officer Bill Delaney, said their only purpose was to ask the hippies to quiet down.

'HAD NO CHOICE'

But when they arrived, he related, someone from above cried:

"It's the fuzz! It's the cops! Run!"

The policeman continued: "They all started scattering. So we had no choice but to call for reinforcements and round them up."

Much to their surprise, the quarry turned out to include not only hippies, but two of the world's leading ballet artists.

GIRL HURT

One girl, Sherry Riley, 21 fell about 10 feet from a back stairway and injured her back. She was taken to San Francisco General Hospital.

Rudi, famed for his "magnificent muscular prowess" in the ballet, scampered up the stairs to the roof and was found lying flat on his face.

The black-haired Margot scrambled onto adjoining stairs leading to the roof of an adjacent building and sought to hide. She and three others were arrested there.

MARIJUANA FOUND

The officers said they found seven hand-rolled marijuana cigarets in a built-in china cabinet, plus four more scattered on the front steps. A short marijuana smoking pipe was in another cabinet.

They found two reels of 8 millimeter movie film described as "pornographic."

however there was no projector in the place, and the films had not been shown.

FINALE TOMORROW

The Royal Ballet schedule winds up tomorrow night at the Opera House, with Margot and Rudi starring in "Romeo and Juliet" — among their most celebrated roles.

The management said:

"There is no change as far as we know. It is expected they will appear."

The troupe then leaves for an engagement in the Hollywood Bowl.

Rudi came out of it with a hippie souvenir — a large button on the lapel of his scarlet-lined jacket. It bore one word:

"CAMP."

At Los Gallos the other night, Publisher Jack Viator commented to a glum-looking Rudolf Nureyev: "Cheer up. If you were still a Communist, you wouldn't be making all this money." Nureyev, bridling: "What money? Most of it goes to your Uncle Sam. I don't mind so much it being used for the war in Vietnam, but I don't like any of it being spent to support Israel." Now there's an odd statement . . .

Nureyev Adds Thrills To 'Sleeping Beauty'

By Arthur Bloomfield

The National Ballet of Canada is considerably more than a plain backdrop for the talents of Rudolf Nureyev — in fact, it has a lot of depth, especially among the women — but last night's Opera House performance of "Sleeping Beauty" couldn't help being dominated by the Byronic presence of Nureyev's presence, of the lean, saggy-cheeked Russian.

He was operating not only as dancer, in the role of Prince Florimund, but also as the evening's choreographer, with a great deal of respect of tradition to his credit. His dancing wasn't exactly routine — as a matter of fact, he worked up to a fantastic pas de deux turns in the grand pas de deux of the final scene — but I'd rate his choreographic contribution as a richer thing.

The emotional balance of a performance with Nureyev can't help be somewhat tilted when he does a role, as he did last night, and he has many times before, with a kind of distracted disengagement. He isn't so much in the performance, as going alongside it on a parallel track, doing his own Byronic thing — which, I admit, can be very exciting in terms of pure dance. But don't call it characterization, call it travis.

As for his choreography, well, much of it was distinctly impressive. The greater part of the prologue, for instance, had a suave, unruffled, almost elegiac quality, the perfect means of drawing an audience into a fairy tale. Conductor George Crum helped this feeling along, shaping the score with much more poise and affectionate, unhurried lyricism than the average ballet conductor draws out of a pit.

Nureyev's idea of doing the reawakening scene in the dark, a spotlight chasing the prince as he flashes here and there, bringing the literally spellbound ladies and gentlemen back into action, had an admitted theatrical conviction, even if there was more showmanship than honest poetry about the way it came off. I'd also credit him enthusiastically for using a wide, fresh, musical vocabulary of dance steps and patterns throughout the evening, although one or two ideas (like the crouching men in the formal dance at the beginning of the last scene) didn't come off nearly as well as others (the pas de deux around a pyramid of girls in the forest vision scene was great).

Meanwhile, I must lament the quasi-pornographic costume of Nureyev's entrance: boots well above the knees, jacket revealing just a touch of bony, sculptural buttocks under white tights.

Veronica Tennant, a girl short in stature but high in talent, was the evening's Princess Aurora, making special news with her handling of slow, suspended balletic challenges. Frank Augustyn's Bluebird was clean, strong, exhilarating, but the next man in line, Winthrop Corey, seriously lacked grandeur. Brilliant girls seemed to be everywhere, making more than helpful contributions. But I didn't like Celia Franca's flat account of the Wicked Fairy role.

Footnote: Nureyev seems to have interpolated, among other things, a second solo with music from Tchaikovsky's "Queen of Spades."

SUPERSTAR RUDOLF NUREYEV and his cultivated partner Veronica Tennant set off sparks in Canadian Ballet's "Sleeping Beauty."

The Incredible Nureyev

AS FAR AS the eye can see are tutus, grand jetes and pirouettes as classical ballet in high old style comes again to the Opera House and suburban auditoriums. Tomorrow in San Francisco, the National Ballet of Canada opens its two-week Northern California visit with "Sleeping Beauty." Rudolf Nureyev's own production in which he will appear with Nadia Potts (see the cover of This World). The Canadian company performs Eraldo D'Amico's production of "Swan Lake." Nureyev will be on stage with Karen Kain — in performances in Cupertino, Berkeley, Sacramento and finally in San Francisco February 24 and 25.

The famous dancer will probably set some endurance record, for he will be giving matinee and evening performances, and also have the lead role in Jose Limon's "The Moor's Pavane" with Mary Jago, (above), and on the same program, in Bruhn's production (after Bournonville) of "La Sylphide."

Principals who will alternate in the productions of "The Sleeping Beauty" will be Cella Franca and Victoria Bertram as Carabosse, Kristine Soleri as the Lilac Fairy, Veronica Tennant, Vanessa Harwood and Karen Kain as Princess Aurora, Karen Kain, Mary Jago and Nadia Potts as Princess Aurora, Veronica Tennant (Feb. 19) and Nadia Potts (Feb. 20) will dance La Sylphide. In "Swan Lake," the Swan Queen will be danced by Karen Kain (Feb. 24 and 25 Mat.) and by Vanessa Harwood (Feb. 25, eve.)

Then to cap, or recap it, the American Ballet Theater offers its different, more familiar version of "Swan Lake" during its engagement here beginning March 4.

Albert Morch

Nureyev, The Kudos Afterward

Rudi Nureyev and the National Ballet of Canada spun into the Opera House last night and the local Jete Set had an evening to remember.

The ballet was "Sleeping Beauty," a three-act, five-scene affair with lots of fairies and stuff, which Rudi produced and staged. Many feared it would be a "Slipping Beauty" because of its three-hour length and some felt Rudi was no longer "a springing chicken." However, it was masterfully done.

Accolade after accolade were heaped upon the lithe, youthful Nureyev following the performance at the midnight supper given by Canadian Consul General and Mrs. James Nutt at their fireplace-snug, paneled residence on Divisadero.

Among the "heapers" were Nancy Hellman Parish, a star in her own right on the ski slopes; Roderick Hall, the Donald Magrins, the Gordon Gettys, Esther Goodman, U.S. State Dept. director of reception Mrs. Bernice Behrens (she always makes things go right), impresario John Kornfeld and his witty wife Anita, British Consul General James Murray with former Pebble Beach blonde Boots Heid (she's buying a historic S.F. house pictured in the Junior League book "Here Today").

Also present were actor Peter Donat, seven-tressed new-girl-in-town Kathy King, Mrs. Fred (Chili) Kohlenberg with new Iranian Consul General Ali Kharadmah (Chili's hubby is in Arizona on business), Mrs. John Upton and her sister, Mrs. Cassell St. Atsyn, the Dan Londons, the John Hestingtons and new Belgian Consul General and Mrs. Guido Vansina.

Before the show a number of the aforementioned balletomanes dined at L'Etoile, and did the Douglas Carvers (party of 12), the Claude Jarmans and Mrs. Frederick Hellman.

Nureyev, looking fitter than ever (doesn't this guy ever age?) in a tight-fitting black tunic outfit (it's his trendy look), does the whole business all over again tonight at the Opera House, plus a party-till-dawn at Bali's, operated by his super soul-mate friend, pal, etc. Mrs. Armen Balianz. At that one, anything goes, which means hand pirouettes between sips.

people Rudolf Nureyev:

He has a fabulous fanny
--women follow him around and stare at it like men looking at bosoms.

By Sally Quinn
Washington Post

Rudolf Nureyev is so much smaller in real life than he is on the stage. Everybody says so. He is only about 5 feet, 8 inches and weighs 150 pounds.

But he is beautiful.

He has those high arched cheekbones, the slanting eyes, the full mouth slashed by a scar, the taut muscular body, strong but gentle hands, tousled brown hair and a provocative half-mischievous, half-southern look in his eyes.

And, of course, there is his behind.

He has a fabulous behind. Women follow him around and stare at his behind as blatantly as men would stare at a woman's bosom.

There is no doubt that at 36, Rudolf Nureyev understands the full extent of his animal magnetism. He teased his interviewer with a half-smile and said, "I know I am beautiful."

There is a strange regard for Nureyev, especially considering his lowly origins; though he says he is not a Russian peasant but a "Pafar."

The dictionary defines tarantula as an "unexpectedly formidable person." Indeed, when he first defected he wanted badly to dance for Balanchine. But Balanchine wouldn't have him and reportedly said, "Rudolf, when you are offered anything the prince, come to me."

He does, as everyone who has followed him knows, have quite a reputation for an erratic temperament.

It was midnight and the lights were dim at the Watergate Terrace. Out of the gleamings of the room, appeared Nureyev, in a dark wool Yves Saint Laurent jacket.

He makes no attempt to carry on a conversation and will answer questions politely if succinctly, constantly on his guard. His English is perfect, his accent is not heavy, just heavy. He doesn't mind silences.

Nureyev talks first of his life in Russia. Of being a peasant child, of not being able to eat. The scar on his lip, he explains, he got when he was 13.

"We were only allowed a ration of so many grams of bread a day, I gave mine to West," he says. "We have grown apart. We have nothing really to talk about. Because I am not involved in politics. You cannot be a dancer and care about it and I devote myself to my art."

Nureyev admits to having less training and to starting later than most dancers. But, without modesty, he will admit that he has something special that "nature gave me."

"I had a talent, a gift. I was talented, I knew I would be a dancer from the beginning."

"It is terrible to be a success," he acknowledges, "I mean that. Because once you become a success you have to maintain your excellence. You don't compete with anybody else any more. You compete with yourself. It is exhausting. You are tired all the time because the hardest thing is maintenance."

"And there are always people coming up behind you. People who are good and who want to be as good as you. So you must be as good as you were."

Nureyev knew, too, that what he wanted would be hard. "Ballet is very hard life. But it's a good one, too."

He revels in his success for his energies, his success; a villa in France, an enormous jewelry collection, a wardrobe designed for him by Saint Laurent, and the company of people like Jackie Onassis and Lee Radziwill.

Nureyev seems shocked at a distinction between art and entertainment. He does not consider what he is or his personality or his mass popularity as anything like "show biz."

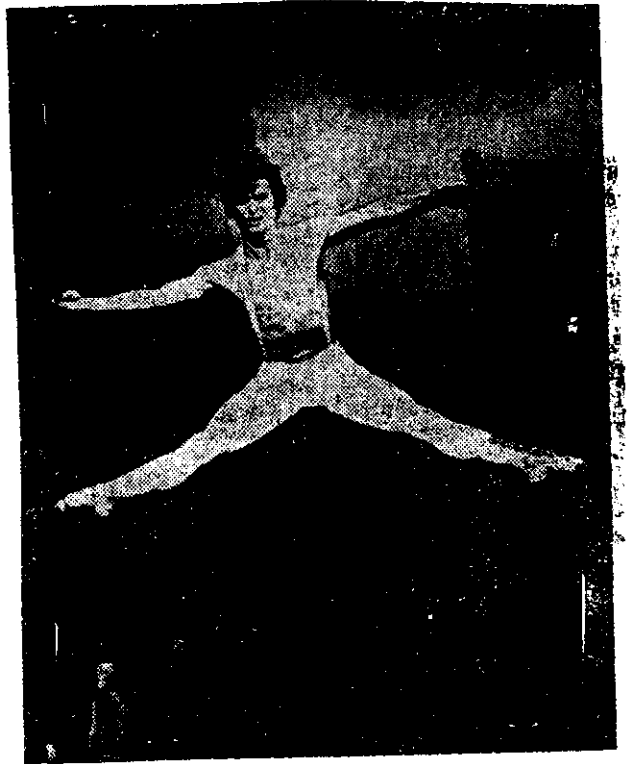

"I don't bring ballet to their level or tastes, they come to mine. If it is because I have the personality or the character to attract people then that is good. If I made ballet popular then that is good for other dancers, too, because they will come and see them. If it's me, that is good for me, but if it hadn't been me, it would have been somebody else."

He is on his third glass of wine and he is beginning to giggle and get a little silly.

"I want to be sober when you drop the bomb question, when you do a Hiroshima on me," he giggles again.

Well, then, Mr. Nureyev, how's your sex life?

"I knew it, you see, there it is," and he clasps his hands and throws his head back and laughs with Slavic glee.

"Sporadic," he announces.

Well, tell us more. The ladies will be disappointed with that little morsel and nothing else.

"The ladies will just have to remain tense," he says sadistically. He leans back smugly, ponders his own words, then leans forward and asks with real earnestness: "How am I doing in this interview? Am I as good as the politicians?"

When told he has revealed absolutely nothing of himself, that he is still a complete mystery, that he is impenetrable as an interviewee, he beams like a Boy Scout receiving a medal.

"Now we must go," he says, his success complete. "We will pay the bill, then you will feel guilty and your conscience will make you write nice things."

And he gets up from the table and stalks triumphantly out of the restaurant, as though he is taking bows for a magnificent performance.

The Soviet's Well-Kept Ballet Secret

New York

Behind the performances of Rudolf Nureyev and Mikhail Baryshnikov that have had ballet audiences agog for several weeks here, stands the specter of a gentle Russian man, almost unknown in the West, named Aleksandr Pushkin.

Not Pushkin, the 19th-century poet, but Aleksandr Pushkin, the brilliant ballet teacher who taught at the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad from 1925, when he also became a leading dancer with the Kirov company, until his death at the age of 62 in 1970.

To study under Pushkin was the dream of aspiring young male dancers throughout the Soviet Union, and during his long career he taught hundreds of them, many of whom then went back to their provinces in turn, taught new generations of students.

But among all his students over the years, there were two who were particularly dear to him and in whose lives he became not only the guiding professional influence, but adoptive father as well.

The first was Rudolf Nureyev, a 17-year-old youth from Transiberia with the high molded cheekbones and the iron will of his Tartar ancestors, who went to Leningrad in 1955. The other was Mikhail Baryshnikov, a quiet fair-haired Latvian who arrived in Leningrad at the age of 16, nine years after Nureyev.

...not a weak-minded evil boy who knows nothing about dance...
...pushkin was the most important influence in the lives of these two dancers...
...both dancers...
...Aleksandr Pushkin was the most important influence in the lives of these two dancers...
...He was an extremely honest person with an extraordinary inner purity...
...Nureyev will remember...
...arrived in Leningrad...
...School on Rossi street...
...yellow and white collar...
...found...
...Nureyev recalled with a smile the other day that he immediately began to calculate how he could escape from the director and get into Pushkin's class. He says he became so unpopular that the director finally said to Pushkin, "I'm sending you an obstinate little idiot..."

people came to those classes, people from all parts of the world but few would sit quietly in the corner, talking to pupils.

"Many people even took notes to recreate his genius, but even a trunkful of notes is like dead baggage. It was the exchange of feelings that was his great gift. It was a born talent that came from his great sensitivity. He knew the psychological side of each of his pupils."

That's Me All Over

ALAS AND A LACK! The world's greatest male dancer (and ticket-seller), Rudolf Nureyev, will not be with American Ballet Theater when that company opens its two-wk. Bay Area run at the Opera House March 8. Red-Nosed Rudolf, suffering from something close to pneumonia, checked out of a Santa Monica hospital over the wkend and took off for a long rest in his Monte Carlo tax shelter . . .

Result of examination:

The known specimens, K1 through Kc5, are not adequate for comparison with the questioned hand printing on Q1.

No indented writing was found on Q1.

Specimen Q1 was tested for migration patterns in an effort to determine the approximate date the note was hand printed with negative results. The age of this writing does not appear to be determinable by this means.

When incorporating information furnished by [REDACTED] into communications suitable for dissemination outside the Bureau, Bureau authority is not necessary when the information can be paraphrased so that the identity of the informant is not jeopardized. When certain specific information is of such a nature as to prohibit dissemination, the Bureau should be advised of the basis for non-dissemination.

Certain information furnished by [REDACTED] will be of such a nature as to necessitate a classification above "Confidential", since the disclosure of this information to unauthorized persons could have a detrimental effect upon international relations and the national defense. In all other instances, a classification of "Confidential" will be adequate if the information relates to Soviet nationals and can be adequately paraphrased.

When disseminating information received from [REDACTED] no reference should be made to the time (date, month or year) the information was received. This should be set forth administratively.

Suitable paraphrasing of the information to be disseminated, plus concealment of the time of its receipt will materially assist in concealing the identity of the source.

IN VIEW OF THE HIGHLY SENSITIVE POSITION OF [REDACTED] EXTREME CAUTION MUST BE EXERCISED IN HANDLING ANY INFORMATION ATTRIBUTED TO THIS SOURCE, AND NO ACTION TAKEN WHICH COULD CONCEIVABLY JEOPARDIZE THE SECURITY OF THE INFORMANT OR REVEAL HIS IDENTITY.

On [REDACTED] informant was asked if he is familiar with the name RUDOLPH NUREYEV, and whether he could furnish any information concerning this individual. It is noted that NUREYEV is a Soviet who was formerly associated with the Kirov Ballet of Leningrad, prior to his defection to the West at Paris, France, on 6/6/63.

Informant immediately recognized the name of NUREYEV as that of a Soviet defector. He also remembered that NUREYEV was a ballet dancer. He said that somewhere he heard that NUREYEV had written a book, but informant said he has never seen this book, and has not read it. He said that, to his knowledge, on one in the Soviet colony in NY has ever spoken of NUREYEV in his presence. Informant said he could furnish no information relating to NUREYEV's defection, or does he have any information reflecting that NUREYEV has, in any way, been connected with espionage activity. Informant said it is his recollection that NUREYEV "escaped" from the Soviet Union in 1961. He said NUREYEV was not a particularly famous dancer in the Soviet Union.

BACKGROUND OF CASE:

It is noted that a handprinted note addressed to "NUREYEV" was discovered hidden in a wall plaque in Room 110 of the Hyatt House Hotel, Salinas, California, 3/18/64. The note appeared to be of possible espionage significance and contained therein was a reference to the note being placed at that location "on 7-19."

Hotel records reveal that [redacted] occupied Rooms 108 and 110 from [redacted] occupied Room 108 on the night of [redacted] a room which is part of a suite of two rooms connected to Room 110 with an adjoining door. [redacted] occupied Room 110 on the night of [redacted]. There were only two other occasions during 7/63 when either of the rooms were occupied and neither appeared pertinent to this investigation.
